Grecootel Pallas Athena: Luxury and simplicity meet in downtown Athens

Nothing can beat the unique location of Pallas Athena. Just minutes away from Omonia Square and a few blocks away from the shopping area of Ermou, the modern hotel is a gateway to the most famous downtown Athens areas including Plaka, Monastiraki and Theisio. Member of the boutique hotel group Grecootel, Pallas Athena features 63 superior and art inspired guestrooms and suites. Each room features a double bed, free wifi, flat screen TV, a mini bar and free coffee and tea. You will also find upscale bathroom products that include a robe and slippers and a dental kit.

The breakfast room is impressive: guests can have everything from the traditional Greek feta cheese to freshly made bread and omelets, cakes, yogurt, cereal and fruits amongst others. The Cretan corner will entice your appetite for the specialties of the Greek island that include manouri cheese, honey, cheese pies, olives and rusk bread. But the most impressive of all is the French Sparkling wine. A glass of bubbles just before starting your sightseeing, is a wonderful way to celebrate your vacation!

Another delightful feature of this boutique hotel is the art found on all floors by local young and emerging artists. Finally, guests can visit the special Agreco Farm Corner near the lobby and get familiar with the Cretan products.

The Staff are professional, friendly, elegantly dressed and helpful. For example I loved waking up to a real and gentle human voice every morning!
