International Medical Congress at Grecotel Kos Imperial Thalasso

The work of the 2nd International Immunology Conference "Human & Translational Immunology Conference 2019" was completed with the participation of 154 participants at Grecotel Kos Imperial Thalasso. The conference was held from 29 May to 3 June with a view to providing a channel of communication for immunologists around the world, encouraging the presentation of pioneering case studies, research and new medical approaches to the international scientific and medical community.

The international conference, gathering the interest of the scientific and medical community worldwide, is the initiative of doctors Peter Katsikis from the Erasmus University Medical Center in Rotterdam, Bali Pulendran from Pathology & Microbiology and Immunology USA and Stephen Schoenberger from the La Jolla Institute for Allergy and Immunology, CA USA, and editor-in-chief of the magazine Nature Immunology, Jamie Wilson. In this year's event, work and research on immunology were presented in a creative and innovative way.

The main works of the conference, as well as an interactive presentation of the works, took place in the "Hippocrates" Hall, while outside of the conference rooms the range of luxurious facilities, impressive public areas, the 8 restaurants and bars of the hotel were used by the attendees. All the conference participants, members of the scientific and medical community, stayed in Grecotel Kos Imperial Thalasso's spacious, bright rooms, enjoying hospitality of the highest standards.

The luxurious Grecotel Kos Imperial Thalasso, close to the city of Kos, is an exotic paradise dedicated to summer holidays for the whole family. In a magnificent area of 100 acres, the main building and the bungalow village overlook a fabulous sandy beach and the endless blue of the Aegean, while impressive lounges and covered verandas create a special atmosphere of luxury and grandeur. A rising river crosses the resort and the numerous pools give the feel of the lagoon with rock gardens and palm trees. When on the island of Hippocrates you cannot miss the impressive Elixir ThalassoSpa in this unique hotel.
