Warner Bros International TV Production at Grecotel Kos Imperial Thalasso

Warner Bros has recently completed a €3.5 million international production at the luxury Grecotel Kos Imperial Thalasso Resort, which took place from May 12th to June 16th. The six-episode TV series "Room Number 301", in an original script by Kate Ashfield, directed by Mikko Kuparinen, with a cast of popular Scandinavian actors, and is set to premiere on Finnish TV this December.

The luxurious public areas, the swimming pools, the restaurants and bars, and of course the hotel rooms were the main stage for the filming of the series, while also incorporating the natural beauties of the island.

Most of the series was shot at Grecotel Kos Imperial Thalasso and Kos with the collaboration of Inkas Films, based in our country. It will be completed in Finland and will feature throughout the Scandinavian peninsula. It falls into the category of psychological thrillers, for which Scandinavian fiction is well known, and is expected to garner the interest of millions of viewers worldwide.

The five-star Grecotel Kos Imperial Thalasso, close to the city of Kos, is an exotic paradise dedicated to summer holidays for the whole family. In a magnificent area of 100 acres, the main building and the bungalow village overlook a fabulous sandy beach and the endless blue of the Aegean, while impressive lounges and covered verandas create a special atmosphere of luxury and grandeur.

The water element dominates the resort and the numerous pools give the feel of the lagoon with rock gardens and palm trees. When on the island of Hippocrates you cannot miss the impressive Elixir ThalassoSpa in this unique hotel.
